

MATERIALS NAMED FOR NEW STREETS

Resolutions Adopted by Council Authorizing Improvement Contracts with DeGolyer & Co.

BRICK AND CONCRETE CHOSEN

$800 Appropriated from General Fund to Street Fund—$500 Transferred to Incidental Fund.

At a short session of the city council last night resolutions were adopted selecting the kind of materials for the improvement of North Walnut, South Chestnut and Carter streets, and also authorizing the contracts with DeGolyer & Company for the work. The property owners affected by the proposed improvements were given a specified time to designate the kind of material desired upon the street abutting their property and as the time has expired the resolutions were adopted so there would be no delay when the contractors were ready to begin the work. It was decided at a recent meeting that DeGolyer & Company would be awarded the contracts, but no record was made until last night.

According to the resolutions, North Walnut and South Chestnut streets will be paved with reinforced concrete and Carter street will be improved with vitrified brick. A number of the property owners on the various streets asked for the material named in the resolutions. North Walnut will be paved from the tracks of the B. & O. Southwestern Railroad to Seventh street, South Chestnut from Laurel to Jackson and Carter street from Tipton to Bruce.

Base suggested that the contractors be instructed to excavate only part of the street at a time so that traffic would not be blocked. He also stated that it would be inconvenient for the fire department to answer calls if all the intersections were blocked at the same time. Davison said that it would be difficult for the contractors to excavate a few blocks at a time on such a large contract and that it would entail additional expense.

In compliance with the request of the council the property owners desiring to have the streets along their dwellings oiled, filed a notice of those to be sprinkled. Several blocks on about a dozen streets will be treated with oil, the property owners having agreed to purchase the oil if the city would sprinkle it.

Davison reported that the open ditch near the D'Heur Swain Lumber Company was filled with debris and upon his motion the street commissioners was ordered to employ men and teams to remove the rubbish. In its present condition only a part of the water can be carried away.

Base introduced a resolution to appropriate the sum of $8,000 from the general fund into the street fund. This amount is more than will be needed to pay for the city's part of the new improvements, but was appropriated so as to provide for general street repair work.

A resolution was also introduced by Base to appropriate $500 from the general fund to the incidental fund.

MOTORCYCLIST OVERCOME BY HEAT THIS AFTERNOON

Mack Thomas Received Sun Stroke and Was Rendered Unconscious—Fell to Sidewalk.

While riding a motorcycle on Tipton street this afternoon, Mack Thomas, son of Mrs. U. G. Miller, was overcome by the heat. He had been riding the machine for some time and when he approached the corner of Chestnut and Tipton streets felt himself getting dizzy and jumped from the machine. He left the motorcycle near Voss' store and started to walk towards Indianapolis avenue. He fell to the sidewalk, however, before he had gone far.

Voss' ambulance was called and young Thomas was taken to his home on East Second street. He was unconscious for a while, but was pronounced out of danger later.

Many persons have complained that today seemed to be the hottest day of the summer, although the local weather observer reports that the thermometer only registered ninety degrees. On several days this summer a higher temperature has been recorded.

CHILDREN HAVE FIRST REHEARSAL FOR "HIAWATHA"

Given at the City Park Yesterday Afternoon in Presence of Their Parents.

Yesterday afternoon at the city park was held the first rehearsal of the Indian play, Hiawatha, which will be presented at the Tipton's Island celebration, July 4. The rehearsal was given for the parents of the children who will participate and quite a number were present and complimented the manner in which the work was prepared.

From this time a rehearsal will be held each Friday afternoon on the lawn at the residence of T. S. Blish, North Chestnut street. Miss Maude Wagner, who supervised the play, left today for her home at Noblesville and hereafter the children will be drilled by Miss Kate Andrews and W. G. Geile. This play will be one of the principal features of the celebration and is looked forward to with great pleasure.

T. S. Blish, who is making arrangements for the celebration, announces that the guns and ammunition have been ordered and will be here in plenty of time. The grounds at Indian Mound are also being prepared for the celebration.

OLD YARD ENGINE 401 OUT OF WATER

B. & O. Southwestern Company Raises Locomotive From Blue Hole, Near Washington.

DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED

Has Been in Quaggy Bottom Since March Flood—Work Will Cost About $3,000.

B. & O. Southwestern yard engine 401, which went to the bottom of Blue Hole, White River, near Washington when a trestle gave way, has been recovered. Theodore Gharst, Dan Schaffer, Clifford McLemore and Leason Jackson were drowned when the accident occurred. The men were well known to local employees of the B. & O. Southwestern.

The Washington Herald tells of the work in bringing the old engine to the surface.

On the evening of March 27, (seventy days ago) Theodore Gharst pulled open the throttle of yard engine 401 and steamed west from the relay depot to a point south of Oak Grove cemetery where a large gang of men were engaged in filling sacks with sand. At his side was Reason Jackson, his fireman. After all was made ready the engine moved off down the track with a few ears loaded with sand bags. Nearing the trestle at Blue Hole Gharst applied the air and the big mass of steel and wood came to a standstill. What this stop was made for has never been explained in an official way. A moment later Gharst applied the steam and 401 crossed to the west side of the dangerous pool. Workmen hurriedly unloaded the sand bags and the engine was reversed for a return to the sand pit. But it did not go far.

When the engine reached the west edge of the trestle the supports to the grade gave way and 401 with Gharst and Jackson, Dan Schaffer and Cliff McLemore, C. C. Stevens and Dan Tucker went down into the water which had a roar to be likened only to various places down the gorge from Niagara Falls. Workmen near heard the unusual commotion and immediately the word was passed along among the long line of night laborers that "Old 401 had gone down." When the raging waters had ceased their roar a few days later Patrolman Capehart took upon himself the duty of scouting about the place in the hope of locating the machine, and he succeeded. A diver later corroborated the statement of Capehart. Removal at that time was impossible because of the stage of the water and efforts to bring it to high ground were postponed.

A few days ago the real work of removal was begun. A great chain as large, perhaps, as an ordinary man's leg at the thigh, was made fast to the engine as it rested in the quagmire on the northwest edge of the old Blue Hole. To this a brace of cables were attached, and to these a single strand led off down the right of way toward White river. Two powerful locomotives and the steam wrecking crane were brought into

BIG BARN TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Flames Believed to Have Started From Match Carelessly Thrown in Hay by Tramp.

OWNED BY REV. L. F. DIMMITT

Ewing Shields Has Loss of About $400 on Contents—$900 Insurance on Buildings.

A fire, supposed to have started from a match or cigarette carelessly thrown in the hay, destroyed the large barn at the home of Ewing Shields on North Broadway about eleven o'clock Thursday night. The barn was located some distance from the residence and the flames were discovered by a night man at the South-eastern round house, who gave the alarm. In a short time the city firemen were notified and were on the ground. The property is owned by Rev. F. L. Dimmitt of Columbus.

The fire was one of the most brilliant seen in this city for several months and the reflection of the light could be seen for several miles. The fire evidently started on the interior of the barn and when the flames burst through the roof, it was at once seen that the entire building would be destroyed.

A frame silo north of the barn was also burned. Other sheds in the vicinity were not damaged, although for a time it appeared as if they would catch fire. The loss on the buildings is estimated at about $1,400 and $400 on the contents. The buildings were insured for $900, but the contents were not insured, the policy having expired a few days ago.

That the horse was not burned to death was due to his refusal to enter the barn when unhitched earlier in the evening. He was permitted to remain in the barn lot and when the fire was discovered, no trouble was experienced in leading him to a place of safety. Had he been in the stall, he would undoubtedly have been burned to death before anyone could have reached him. The carriage in the shed, adjoining the main building, a hay frame, a set of harness, and other property were burned. Over 100 bushels of corn and 125 bales of hay were also destroyed.

No one was seen about the barn at the time of the fire and if it was caused by trespassers, they must have left the building sometime before the flames were discovered. A neighbor, who was one of the first to see the flames, said that no one left the building.

During the fire John Flechearty, a member of the department, received a severe burn on his right hand. He was attempting to take a line of hose to an adjoining building and placed his hand upon a steel wheel tire, which had become heated from the flames. His hand was painfully burned but it is not serious.

EVIDENCES SEEN OF SOCIAL LOBBY

New Field Has Been Opened up For The Senate Lobby Investigating Committee.

LOOKING INTO THE METHODS

Reported That Flood of Letters and Telegrams Have Been Stopped Since Work Began.

Washington, June 6—In spite of the denials of many senators that they knew of any attempts improperly to influence legislative action, the evidences of a "scientific lobby" and "social lobby" are so prevalent that an entirely new field has been opened up for the senate investigating committee, and much more time than originally set will be required. With the completion of the examination of senators, which was expected today, the committee was preparing to begin the second and greater phase of the hunt, when the "scientific lobbyists"—the men of big business and their agents—will be asked to tell just what methods they have used to influence congressmen.

Although twenty-four senators were yet to be heard when the senate lobby investigation got under way today, Senator Reed, acting chairman, was of the opinion that the investigators would be able to turn the light on some of the so-called lobbyists subpoenaed before adjournment tonight. With the scent of the lobby already strong, Senator Reed was convinced that the committee is on the right trail and that from some of the scores of men who have been summoned it will be able to extract a great deal more information confirming President Wilson's lobby statement.

Senator Reed announced he would ask the senate for an indefinite extension of time for the holding of the hearings. Objection by Senator Jones, yesterday, prevented the consideration of a similar request, but the Missouri senator expected to obtain approval today.

Additional subpoenas were prepared today and in all about seventy-five witnesses—including ex-senators and ex-representatives, who are accused of having used their floor privileges to argue against the tariff with individual congressmen—will be on hand when the general quizz gets under way.

One sweeping effect of the hearing, senators who have so far testified pointed out today, has been to stop the flood of letters and telegrams to members. Practically all the advertising that the sugar agitators have been placing all over the country has also been stopped.

The committee today made plans for definite policy which it will follow in the further hearings.

BLOCKED TREATY WITH JOHN BULL

Senate Gives an Affront to Great Britain.

SETS BACK ARBITRATION PACT

When Renewal of Arbitration Treaty Came Up in the Senate Ratification of Old Pact With England Was Blocked by Objections From Senator Chamberlain. Notwithstanding Fact That Other Countries Were Favored.

Washington, June 6.—The senate delivered what Great Britain is likely to regard as an affront when ratification of the renewed arbitration treaty with that government was prevented after identical treaties with two other countries had been ratified without any objection being raised. The senator responsible for the successful blocking of the attempt to ratify the treaty, Senator Chamberlain of Oregon said frankly he based his opposition on the fact that ratification of the treaty would obligate the United States to arbitrate the Panama canal tolls controversy with Great Britain. Failing to move him by argument, the senate sought to avoid the appearance of giving affront to Great Britain by rescinding the ratification which had already been accorded to exactly similar arbitration treaties with Spain and Italy. The fact that only a few months ago the senate ratified without any objections a renewed limited arbitration with France, however, puts the senate on record as making an exception to the disadvantage of the particular country with which the United States is engaged in a dispute for which arbitration already has been asked.

The British treaty in question expired by limitation yesterday. The two governments agreed to its renewal for another period of five years, and the senate committee on foreign relations brought in a report recommending the ratification of the renewed treaty. In executive session when a vote on the treaty was proposed, Senator Chamberlain objected.

While many senators expressed the opinion that the treaty will eventually be ratified, there is good reason to believe that ratification may be held up for some time.

Senator Chamberlain has already introduced a resolution providing for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer and Hay-Pauncefote treaties, upon which Great Britain bases her protest against exemption of American vessels from payment of canal tolls.

The action of Senator Chamberlain and the consequences likely to grow out of his action, will undoubtedly prove embarrassing to President Wilson and his secretary of state, Mr. Bryan. Mr. Bryan with the president's consent has been clamoring for peace and arbitration treaties.

The reply from Germany now brings all of the big European powers into the list which have expressed interest in the plan.

Details of Big Magazine Deal Being Aired in Court.

New York, June 6.—Before Judge Mayer in the United States district court the group of men who got into trouble in the attempt to introduce high finance methods into the magazine field are on trial on charges of using the mail in a fraudulent stock selling scheme. Frank Orff, president of the Columbian-Sterling Publishing company, which combined six publications under one management in 1911 and sold stock to subscribers and others at $1 a share, heads the list of defendants. The others are John F. B. Atkin, a Philadelphia lawyer; Lee Sidwell, secretary of the company, and Eugene Bryan Yates, a minor officer. Assistant United States Attorney Wood, presenting the case to the jury for the government, said that he would show the merged publications, with the exception of Hampton's, were losing money at the time of consolidation and that the stock selling campaign was based on fraudulent representations. The combination, he said, went into receivers' hands in October, 1911, with office furniture as its principal assets.

When the case came to trial it was learned for the first time that an indictment had been found against Joseph Brinton Haynes, a former president of the company, who is charged with a part in the stock selling scheme, which gathered, it is alleged, more than $1,000,000 from a public that had believed in the money-making powers of magazines.

Haynes disappeared at about the time the affairs of the company were called to the attention of a federal grand jury, and is said to be in London.

PRESSING ISSUE TO CONCLUSION

Chinda Reveals Impatience of His Government.

CALLS AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Though Not at All Unprecedented, the Japanese Ambassador's Direct Conference With the President Is Regarded in Washington as Another Manifestation of Mikado's Government's Desire to Rush Negotiations.

Washington, June 6.—Directly to the White House has Japan carried her grievance in the California land law issue. Ambassador Chinda was granted an audience with the president and discussed the situation with him for nearly an hour.

The president previously had read the Japanese rejoinder to the reply of the United States to the first protest against the California legislation, and so was entirely familiar with the latest presentation of the Japanese case. Preceding the ambassador's arrival the president also had a half hour talk with Secretary of State Bryan, during which the contents of the Japanese note were discussed.

Though not at all unprecedented, the ambassador's call at the White House to discuss the issue with President Wilson directly was regarded here as another manifestation of the desire of the Japanese government to press the issue to a conclusion at an early date. Despite the pressure of the Japanese for an early adjustment of the situation, it was indicated at the White House that the negotiations are far from nearing a conclusion. In fact, it was positively stated at the White House that no basis of settlement of the issue has yet been brought out in either of the three notes that have constituted the diplomatic exchange thus far. This fact is taken to indicate that there is a most protracted discussion a come.

It became known also that the administration has no intention of initiating proceedings against the state of California. Inasmuch as the Japanese demand is for the nullification of the California statute, which it insists must be brought about by the federal government, the position of President Wilson and his advisers is rendered even more difficult.

Unless the Tokio government recedes from or modifies its stand against the California law, nothing but its absolute elimination will enable Japan to withdraw with honor from the discussion. Statements made at the White House lead to the surmise in some quarters that Japan has made some novel proposal which affords basis for the characterization of the forthcoming negotiations as interesting. The Japanese note came up for discussion at the cabinet meeting today, and it is expected that some progress will be made toward outlining the nature of the reply to the latest communication.

THEY SEE NEED OF CURRENCY REVISION

Congress Leaders Desire to Get Early Action.

Washington, June 6.—In view of the present disturbances in the financial world, leaders in congress and administration officials are more than ever convinced of the need of the enactment of a banking and currency law before this session of congress ends. For political reasons the Democrats are disturbed over the present trend and many of them believe a serious blunder will have been made if congress is permitted to adjourn without revising the banking and currency laws.

A leader in the confidence of the administration made the statement that the falling prices pointed to the necessity of establishing the banking and currency system on a modern basis before the present session adjourns.

It is up to the administration to decide whether the banking and currency bill shall be passed at this session. The leaders will abide by the wishes of the administration, even if the session is projected until late in the fall. The house committee on banking and currency will meet to organize on Monday.

IN THE HANDS OF RECEIVER

A Jeffersonville Savings Association Declared Bankrupt.

Indianapolis, June 6.—A petition filed in federal court by creditors and bondholders of the German Savings and Loan association of Jeffersonville asked that the association be declared bankrupt. Following the filing of the petition Judge Anderson appointed the Mutual Trust and Deposit company of New Albany as receiver for the company.

The petition alleges that the German Savings and Loan association applied for a receiver in the Clark county circuit court on Feb. 22, 1913, and that Isaac Dunn was appointed by the court. A subsequent report filed by the receiver, the complaint says, showed that the company had assets of $65,521.56, and liabilities amounting to $71,955.30.

The petitioners allege that the savings company was controlled by a board of directors who "paid little or no attention" to the affairs of the company, and that the active control of the concern was left in the hands of its secretary, George Pfau. The complaint says that power to execute bonds of the company was given him. He negotiated the company's bonds, the complaint alleges, to the amount of $75,000, borrowed money on them and appropriated the money for his own private use. Pfau has been missing for several months.

HE DID NOT ESCAPE PRISON

Robert Green Still in Durance Vile. Despite Reports.

Attica, Ind., June 6.—Robert Green, Waynetown banker-horse thief, whose escape from the prison at Michigan City and later in Ohio, have made him notorious, is still in prison at West Chester, Pa., to which he was sentenced in October, 1911. This information was received by Will Colvert, captain of the Fountain County Horse-thief Detective association, who wired the warden for information concerning a report that Green had escaped. There are indictments against Green in this county, and the reward of $300 offered for his return to this county has never been withdrawn.

A Conflict of Authority.

Gary, Ind., June 6.—The public utilities commission has ruled that firemen must pay streetcar fares, but Walter Brown, a conductor, was fined $25 in the Gary city court because he ejected two city firemen from his car when they refused to pay their fare. The city authorities say the franchise allows firemen to ride free.

Didn't Hear Approaching Train.

Muncie, Ind., June 6.—John Stimpson, seventy-two years old, a prominent farmer living three miles north of Gilman, was killed when the buggy in which he was riding was struck by an L. E. & W. train. Mr. Stimpson was deaf and it is presumed did not hear the approaching train.

Crushed by Auto Truck.

Martinsville, Ind., June 6.—Lee Thompson, twenty-two years old, was killed when the auto truck he was driving shot down a fifteen-foot embankment. Thompson was thrown against a tree, the truck pinning him down.

Cohalan Will Face Charges.

New York, June 6.—Supreme Court Justice Cohalan has decided to accept the Bar association's invitation to answer John A. Connolly's charges that he was a grafter and that he accepted an altered affidavit.

Bolt From a Clear Sky.

Dunreith, Ind., June 6.—Simon Bennett, forty-four years old, was struck by lightning while in his field, the bolt falling from a seemingly cloudless sky.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MEATLESS SANDWICHES. SANDWICHES for the children's school luncheon should, if possible, be made without meat, but with some nourishing and appetizing filling. Cheese and chopped nuts, combined with olives or fresh vegetables, such as lettuce or fresh tomatoes, make nice sandwiches.

Savory Sandwiches.

Cheese and Pimento Sandwiches.—Take a can of pimentos. Rinse them in water. Add to them a peeled onion and a half pound of cheese and chop until quite fine. Slice some sandwich bread, butter it and spread with the chopped mixture. Place two of the slices of bread together to form a sandwich.

Fancy Cheese Sandwiches.—Take an ounce of butter, four tablespoonfuls of American cheese, grated, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley or two teaspoonfuls of chopped olives, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and white pepper, a little paprika and a half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Put the grated cheese into a bowl, add the butter after melting it, then put in the salt, pepper, olives or parsley and the Worcestershire sauce. Mix well and spread on slices of buttered sandwich bread which have been cut thin.

Flavored With Olives.

Cream Cheese Sandwiches.—Mash the cheese in a bowl until it is a paste and then add a little beaten sweet cream and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce to every cheese. Add salt and pepper to taste. Spread on slices of fresh Graham bread which have been cut into rounds and buttered. Add chopped olives, place the slices together and serve.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Walnut Cream Rolls.—Place three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped walnuts into sweet cream enough to cover them. Add two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar and a dash of nutmeg. Let the nuts stand for several hours, then drain and add two teaspoonfuls of whipped cream. Then beat the mixture until it is smooth and spread on slices of sandwich bread which have been thinly buttered and deprived of the crusts. Roll the slices and tie with white baby ribbon. Dip the ends of the rolls in whipped cream, then into chopped and powdered nuts. Adorn the bow with a sprig of parsley.

SMALL BEGINNING OF A GREATER CAMPAIGN

Senate Proposes Destruction of "Third House."

Washington, June 6.—The senatorial investigators of the alleged lobby which President Wilson has assured them is working to defeat the pending tariff bill have come to a definite agreement with regard to the scope of the investigation of the representatives of the affected interests whom they will call before them for examination next week. The members of the sub-committee are convinced that there has been an active lobby both for and against the Underwood bill.

The investigation beginning next week will deal chiefly with the activities of the sugar and the wool lobbies. It will not be confined to these features of the bill, but it will center about them and in large measure the force of the investigation will concentrate upon them. The committee is disposed temporarily to withhold a general investigation. In the opinion of members of the sub-committee this investigation is but the small beginning of a campaign to eliminate lobbying in all forms.

Missing Man's Body Found.

Shoals, Ind., June 6.—The body of Jacob Jones was found near here in the woods. He had been missing for a week and is supposed to have been killed by lightning.

Lesson X. June 8
JOSEPH FORGIVES HIS BROTHERS.
Gen. 45: 1 to 46: 7

Golden Text.—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!—Ps. 133: 1.

We can scarcely imagine the feelings of Joseph as he heard Judah recall his father's anguish at the time of his own supposed untimely death and his reference to his father as an old man whose gray hairs were being brought down with sorrow to the grave and then to Benjamin, the child of his old age, a little one whose brother was dead and he alone left of his mother, and his father loveth him (xlv. 20, 28, 29).

No doubt his heart had longed for many days to reveal himself to them for his father's sake, and now that Benjamin was before him and the other ten the longing to let his aged father know that he was still alive, to behold his face and show him his prosperity and share it with him, must have been almost intolerable. He could not any longer refrain himself, caused every one to go out that he might be alone with his brethren, and he wept aloud so that the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard, and when he could command his feelings he said: "I am Joseph. Doth my father yet live? I am Joseph, your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt" (verses 3, 4). Did men ever hear such wonderful tidings, and can we wonder that they were terrified and could not answer him? Now they understood how he could arrange them at table in the order of their ages and could see a significance in his dealings with them, and they would certainly remember his dreams, for which they hated him.

But then he had been kind to them withal, had restored their money twice, and they had dined with him. So when he said, "Come near to me, I pray you," they came near, and his words must have melted their hearts: "Be not grieved nor angry with yourselves. * * * God did send me before you to preserve life * * * and to save your lives by a great deliverance. So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God" (verses 5, 7, 8). Oh, what wonderful grace, forgiveness and comfort, and what words for all believers to lay to heart, "Not you, but God!"

Perhaps he did not see it at the time, but now in his exaltation he could look back and see it. We sing that we will bless the hand that guided and the heart that planned when throned where glory dwelleth in Immanuel's land. But some one says, Let us have faith in God and do it now and put in practice our belief in Rom. viii. 28. See the longing to make glad his poor father's heart, whom he had not seen for twenty-two years and who was now for the time without a son at all and wondering if he would ever see his loved Benjamin again. "Haste ye and go up to my father and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph" (verses 9-13). They were to tell Jacob of his son's glory as ruler over all Egypt and that they were all to come to Egypt and be nourished by him there during the remaining five years of famine. They were to hasten back to Egypt and hasten to bring down their father (verses 9, 13).

When he had unburdened his heart and they no doubt continued to be amazed beyond measure he then kissed and wept upon each one, beginning with Benjamin (verses 14, 15). The news spread that Joseph's brethren had come. Pharaoh heard and was well pleased and heartily indorsed the coming of them all to Egypt and that wagons should be sent to bring Jacob and all the families, wives and little ones. Soon they were on their way, loaded with good things, for the journey to Canaan and return. In due time Jacob welcomed home his eleven sons, and Benjamin was safely restored to him, and there must have been a great burden lifted from the father's heart.

But what is this that they are telling him, "Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt?" (xxvi.) He cannot believe it. His heart grows faint at the tidings. But they untiedly confirm it with many an incident, and Judah tells his story, and Benjamin says, "Yes, father, it is all true, and his arms have been about my neck, and he kissed us all, and he sent these wagons; see, father, wagons from Egypt." When Jacob saw the wagons he was convinced and said: "Joseph, my son, is yet alive. I will go and see him before I die." The wagons were the convincing evidence, and if there were more such convincing evidences in our lives that Jesus lives there might be some more believers. Note in verse 20 that because the good of the land of Egypt was before them they were not to regard their Canaan stuff, and may the glory of the kingdom affect us that way. He gave a change of raiment to each brother, but to Benjamin five changes and 300 pieces of silver (verse 22). When they dined with him Benjamin's portion was five times as much as theirs (xliii. 34). The number five signifies abundance, for the word "abundantly" is first found in the fifth day in Gen. i. Look up other fives and see if I am right. How important for us his exhortation, "See that ye fall not out by the way" (verse 24). Consider Luke xxiv. 15, 31, 39; Zech. xii. 10; Acts ix. 5; ii. 23; xxv. 19; Eph. ii. 13; i Cor. iv. 4; Phil. iii. 13, 14; i John, iv. 9. Suggested by A. R. H.

WELCOME FOR PEARY

Geographical Society of France Gives Reception in His Honor.

Paris, June 6.—The Geographical Society of France tendered Admiral Peary a reception today, which was largely attended by scientists and other persons of prominence. The affair was brought about largely through the efforts of Dr. Chareot, the explorer, who says that it would have been an expression of doubt of the explorer's discoveries if Paris had failed to entertain Peary after London, Berlin and New York had done so. It is an open secret that the Geographical Society of Paris has not been anxious to honor Peary. He was met at the station by a delegation, following which a ceremonial was held at the Sorbonne.

New York, June 6.—Ten thousand New York school-boys take possession of Central Park this afternoon in the physical training and athletic demonstration given under the direction of the Public Schools Athletic League. They were received by a committee of the Royal Bermuda Yacht Club, which will entertain the visitors during their stay.

North Ewing and North Chestnut streets remind the people who live on them of a section of the Indianapolis Speedway almost every evening, when automobiles engage in races, running anywhere from twenty to forty miles per hour. Fortunately many of these races occur late at night when not many people and especially children are on the streets, but there is all the more danger to a person who chances to be crossing because in the dark, it is difficult for the drivers to see a sufficient distance ahead and almost impossible for someone driving from a side street to escape a collision with the automobiles. And then these races are especially conducive to sleep from ten to twelve o'clock at night when the drivers open up the exhaust and the passing automobiles sounds like a rapid fire machine gun as it flies past the residences on these streets.

This was made necessary, he explained, as the claims of the field examiners amounted to about $400 and there was not a sufficient surplus to pay the claims.

J. A. Quinn & Company asked for permission to tear up a part of the improved street on North Ewing in front of Dr. J. A. Davis' residence to repair a leak in the water main. City Attorney Elsner stated that inasmuch as the contractors had given a maintenance bond for five years it would be necessary to get permission from them.

Because of the absence of Misch, W. R. Day and Sherman Day other business was postponed and it was decided to hold another session of the council tonight, this action having been taken upon the motion of Ho-dapp.

MISSING GIRL WAS IN INDIANAPOLIS SATURDAY
Detectives Find Elizabeth Stone, of Summitville, Spent Night With Her Cousin.

Indianapolis, June 6—A detective has learned that Elizabeth Stone, 16 years old, daughter of A. P. Stone, who disappeared from her home at Summitville, May 27, spent Saturday night in this city with a cousin living on North Pennsylvania street.

The detectives refuse to say where the cousin lives. The cousin said she placed the girl on an interurban car and started her for home. She said she did not know the girl had run away. The detectives say the girl was all right while she was in the city. She disappeared after the cousin had put her on the car. On the evening the girl left home she called Goldie Lewis, a neighbor, and got her to aid her in packing her clothing. This she took in suitcases to an alley. Shortly afterward an automobile was heard. Two shots were fired, but no one had been able to learn why the shots were fired.

The Lewis girl said Elizabeth said she was unhappy at home and that she was going to Muncie, Ind., to work in the home of an attorney. Her father is greatly worried. The police departments of all of the principal towns in the state have been looking for her.

"I SEE BY THE PAPERS."
Did you ever stop to think of the deep significance of the above oft-repeated colloquialism?
It is estimated that more than 95 per cent. of the population of the United States that can read are newspaper readers.
The quotation, or rather the universal repetition of the same thought signifies to what a tremendous extent the public depends upon the press for its ideas and daily information.
Not so very long ago "I see by the papers" referred nearly always to some news happening but today the expression is just as likely to indicate store news—advertising news: the arrival of some choice merchandise, some change in style, a new idea in apparel, or any one of a hundred interesting and constantly changing bits of information which crowd the pages of the reliable daily papers like THE REPUBLICAN.
There is, indeed, much worth while that one may "see by the papers" if he will but study the advertising pages.

JACKSON COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING
Subject Presented by Dr. G. G. Graessle—Other Physicians Join in Discussion.

The Jackson County Medical Society met at the City Library Thursday afternoon and ten members out of twenty-five were in attendance. Dr. G. G. Graessle presented the subject, "Diagnosis and Treatment of Acute Intestinal Obstructions." The subject was ably presented and thoroughly discussed by a number of others present. The consensus of opinion was that the deferring of operation early in these cases usually resulted disastrously, whereas in all of the cases operated upon when the diagnosis was made early recovered if there was no malignant condition.

Dr. A. G. Osterman reported a case of pellagra in the city, which is making apparent improvement under treatment. The meeting was profitable to all present.

It is expected that Dr. A. C. Kimberlain, president of the State Medical Association, will meet with the Society sometime during the summer and it is hoped that all the physicians of the county will attend. Dr. L. B. Hill reported that thirteen physicians from the county attended the district medical meeting at Columbus and that the meeting was a success.

WHEAT HARVEST WILL BEGIN ABOUT THE MIDDLE OF MONTH

Prospects Are Excellent for a Bumper Crop of High Quality—Rye Harvest.

The wheat in this county is rapidly maturing with the warm weather and some of the farmers are making arrangements to begin harvest about June 20. A few of the fields, it is expected, will be ready to cut several days before that time while others will be a week or so later.

Reports from all parts of the county show that the wheat is in good condition and the local dealers are expecting to handle a large crop. The quality it is said will be as good if not better than the average. A few of the fields were damaged by the high water, but these have shown much improvement during the past few weeks and the high water will have little effect upon the crop except in the bottom lands where the grain was entirely washed away.

Although there is little rye grown in this vicinity a number of fields are seen around Seymour and these will be ready to cut in about ten days or two weeks.

play and with a mighty pull in the hope of bringing the engine to the west bank, the cable snapped. Repairs were made and again the steam was applied. This time old 401 moved and success was in store. While about twenty feet from the west bank and in about ten feet of water, the cable parted for the third time. Again repairs were made and now 401 in high and dry of the water.

The mere bringing of the engine to the above-water-line does not mean that the work is completed. Much remains to be accomplished before the engine can be moved to the shops, but progress will likely be rapid. The trestle at Blue Hole will have to be reinforced at the west end and supports will have to be placed before it is safe for the big wrecking crane to begin its work of hoisting the dead engine from the foot of the embankment to the right of way. Tomorrow, maybe, may see all this accomplished.

Shop men and road men who were familiar with Gharst and his 401 will hardly recognize the machine today. Steam pipes are broken and twisted, the boiler head is shattered to fragments, all woodwork has been stripped from the fastenings, the heavy coats of paint have been washed away and the hull resembles, to the inexperienced, a great mass of rust and junk. But not so to the railroad men. Peering down into the clear, blue waters of Blue Hole, a fireman gazed long and keen. The great machine was visible, save the extreme east end—the end where the four men were standing and seated when they went down to death. "There's the best engine of her kind the B. & O. ever owned," said the fireman, "and it will not be long until she is in the service again." It is estimated that the cost of repairs will aggregate $3,000 and the work will be done at the local shops.

And so it is that the final chapter of 401 and her connection with the Blue Hole tragedy is about to be written.

France Has a Black Army.

At the national review on July 14 Paris may see the black soldiery of France for the first time. In six years France has raised a black army of practically 140,000, and it is now proposed that each section, the Senegalese, the Madagascar troops and others, shall send a delegation and that President Poincare shall present each regiment with its flag. The First Senegalese regiment, which has its flag already, will receive the insignia and the Legion of Honor, which decoration was recently gazetted. The army has been brought into being by Colonel Mangin, who was, when a captain, second in command of Marchand's famous mission to Fashoda in 1899. At the present time it is understood that the Senegalese army is well over 50,000 strong and could be doubled very quickly. There are also regiments from the Sudan, from Dahomey, from the Kongo, from French Guinea and the Ivory Coast, Algeria, Tunis and Morocco. There are very few black officers.—Argonaut.

Antarctic Illusions.

A correspondent, writing to the London Times, says: "Apropos of the report from Mr. Mawson's expedition that the Aurora found only sea where in 1840 D'Urville and a week later Wilkes had laid down Cote Claire on their maps, it is curious and interesting to recall the fact that the English whaler Balleny in 1839 saw the same ice wall that was seen by D'Urville, but on approaching what seemed to be land 'made it out to be fog hanging over some icebergs.' Balleny had had much experience of the ice and the illusory appearances of land. Another antarctic illusion, this time of Wilkes alone, was dissipated by Ross in 1841, when he sailed over a long stretch of 'mountainous lands' not far away from the Balleny islands, precipitately charted by the American explorer in the preceding year."

An Innocent Engraver.

French newspapers are telling a story about Florian, who is in the front rank as an engraver, but who has never known how to charge for his talent. Some time ago a South American came to him to engage the making of a design for a postage stamp representing the landing of Columbus and containing twenty-five figures. "This is a difficult piece of work," said Florian, "and it will cost you 1,500 francs." The South American accepted the terms. Florian set to work. For three months he was so burdened with his task that he fell ill. The work was finally completed, delivered and paid for. Florian has since learned that the South American had received from his government authority to offer 3,000 francs for the work.—Indianapolis News.

America Lags In Aviation.

According to estimates prepared by Aircraft of the total expenditures of twenty-five governments for aeronautical work during the last five years, the United States stands fourteenth—behind Chile, Bulgaria and Greece and barely ahead of Denmark and China. At the top of the list stand Germany, with 400 aeroplanes, thirty dirigibles and expenditures of $28,000,000, and France, with 400 aeroplanes, twenty-five dirigibles and expenditures of $22,000,000. The United States' total contribution has been $435,000 and the extent of its equipment only twenty-eight aeroplanes and one dirigible. By public subscription Germany has also raised $3,500,000, France $2,500,000 and Italy $1,000,000.

Servia's Crude Monuments.

Servia is becoming a country of monuments. Among the peasants a custom prevails of honoring relatives slain in battle by the erection of a block of wood in which is rudely carved a bas relief of the departed. These monuments are erected near the soldier's home when it is impossible to place them on the field where he fell. As many of the Servian heroes fell in the enemy's territory the monuments are necessarily raised in their homes, and very few farms are to be found today in which one at least of these crude carvings is not to be seen. They are usually painted in vivid reds and blues. Above the head of the wooden figure is an inscription giving the soldier's name.

Belgium's Royal Group.

"To gain a correct idea of the 'royal style' in this country," writes an Englishwoman from Brussels, "you must see the latest picture of the reigning family. The king, who looks like a schoolmaster, is seen sitting on a leather library couch, and seated next to him is the queen in black skirt and white shirt waist. Next to the queen stands little Crown Prince Leopold. Mother and son are playing on violins and King Albert, with the score before him, seems to be alert to detect an error. The group suggests a happy home in which pomp and display play no important part."

Unreasonable Man.

Impatiently the man was pacing up and down the room waiting for his wife to complete her toilet. Presently he roared:

"Well miss Caruso's aria in the second act if you don't hurry a little with your dressing."

To this the lady shrieked back:

"Hurry a little? Why, Henry Harrison, weren't you ashamed? Here I've been hurrying as fast as ever I can for the last three hours and a half!"—a little while.

Woman's World

Mrs. Alice Harriman
Only Woman Publisher.

MRS. ALICE HARRIMAN.

If your capital did not exceed $925 would you venture it all upon the publication of a book of verse?

If "look before you leap" is your rule of life you probably wouldn't, but Mrs. Alice Harriman, the woman who did, lives up to the theory that "nothing ventured is nothing gained."

Mrs. Harriman, by the way, was a Seattle woman by adoption and is naturally imbued with the venture-some spirit of the great northwest, so when she decided to put out a volume of verse, "Songs of the Sound," at her own expense her friends were fearful of success, but not surprised at the daring move.

This little volume, which appeared in a dress to attract tourists, was conspicuously displayed in all the book stores of "the Puget sound country" and in less than ten days paid for itself and justified the author's business sixth sense, a sense she had evidently lived without up to this time.

Indeed, Mrs. Harriman was utterly ignorant of the simplest business methods when she started out. Yet in five years, alone and entirely unaided, she has built up a publishing business of sufficient importance to straddle the continent, for the Alice Harriman Publishing company has offices both in New York city and in Seattle.

The business really started in the following way: "The Songs of the Sound" caught the eye of a wealthy and influential woman of Seattle, who asked Mrs. Harriman to publish memoirs of her father, a man of political importance and "the father of Seattle." Although ignorant of the first principles of the technical part of publishing, she consented. By studying books brought out by the big publishing houses she was able to pattern her book upon them. These memoirs gave Mrs. Harriman her first real piece of business, and the venture was so successful that other books were offered her for publication. But the publication that was most influential in determining her success was one that other publishers had fought shy of—a French translation made by Lafcadio Hearn.

Now, with the exception of her secretarial staff, Mrs. Harriman is the whole publishing outfit. She designs covers, wrappers, circulars and does the "makeup" and whatever other part of the profession demanding individual attention. Then she turns the manuscripts over to the printer and binder.

Mrs. Harriman confesses that she does not belong to the domestic type of woman, and, although she could mix a salad or bake good bread, she would be utterly incapable of turning out a sartorial confection on the slit skirt order. She prides herself upon being womanly for a that. She would "rather write a poem than pay a visit."

"A business woman," Mrs. Harriman says, "does not have to wear mannish clothes, affect men's walk or men's language or manners." There is no reason why a woman to be successful in the business world should be "one of the boys." What a woman does need is a love of and devotion to her work, and to this devotion Mrs. Harriman attributes her success in a field not hitherto entered by woman.

Mrs. Harriman, too, is unlike her sisters in another respect—she has no feeling whatever about telling her age. Indeed, she frankly and fearlessly admits that she had never published a line or thought of bringing out any body's ideas in book form until she had reached her forty-fifth year. Mrs. Harriman has been in business five years. The rest is plain sailing.

The Latest Slang.

When a fresh, pretty young girl replies to your inquiry as to whether a certain dance was a success or a certain young man agreeable with "Oh, perfectly fine!" or "Simply great!" you find yourself wishing she would drop the vernacular and use good English. But when some one tells you that your new hat is "snappy" and a debutante enthusiastically says that you gave a "wonderful party," accent on the first syllable, you smile indulgently and your sensibilities are not jarred. Slang goes out of fashion, and nothing is more stale and dreary than last year's slang. But the latest additions to the vocabulary always seem to fill a long felt want, so "simply great" and "fine" have gone their way to oblivion, while "snappy" and "wonderful" have come to the fore.—a little while.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Ann E. Magill has celebrated in Philadelphia her one hundred and fifth birthday.

Mrs. Isabella Goodwin is the only woman detective of New York city who is connected with the police department.

Heleen Pleiss, aged five, of St. Louis, is an expert swimmer, and her father is training her to some day go after a world's championship.

Lady Frances Wolseley, the new British peeress, who has brought the number up to nineteen who claim the title as their right, is the daughter of the late Field Marshal Wolseley and is widely known as the most expert woman gardener in England.

Miss Daisy Ogden, district passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, said to be the only woman holding such a position, began in a clerical position and has been steadily advanced because of her exceptional grasp of the business details of her work. She has headquarters in Chicago.

Fly Catches.

The Boston club has officially adopted the nickname "Braves," as they have retained the Indian head on the shirt sleeves.

Ganzel, son of Charley Ganzel, the old Detroit catcher, is Hugh Duffy's first baseman on the Portland team of the New England league.

Jim Thorpe is trying to master the spitball in private. The Indian athlete is pitching to Wilbur Robinson every morning, and the latter believes that he will amount to something as a box-man in due time.

As Jimmy Archer is a heavier batsman than Vic Saier, he may be played regularly at first base by Manager Evers of the Cubs, who is anxious to keep Roger Bresnahan in harness behind the bat as much as possible. Archer always could play the initial bag up to the handle.

Science Siftings.

A German expert has demonstrated that beans contain a product which, when properly treated, will make a very good grade of crude rubber.

By treating it with certain acids a French inventor has brought out a paper which disintegrates and destroys any inscription written upon it after a time.

After over two years' work a special staff at Greenwich observatory has enumerated all the stars on 206 photographic plates, representing about 52,000,000 stars.

A German chemist recently discovered that the extract of the skin of red radishes in alcohol is more sensitive to acids and alkalis than litmus, tumeric or any of the chemicals usually used to detect their presence.

The Royal Box.

King George V. of England, it is reported, is investing extensively in land.

A French paper has discovered that the Kaiser is prodigal in the use of perfume. He is devoted to a variety of extracts, such as ylang-ylang, iris, Alpine briar and corylopsis, which, it is said, he uses much too extravagantly to conform to the dictates of good taste.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

The Ways of Men.

Boreleigh—Hello, Dubbs, old man! Delighted to see you! Fine! How have you been, and how is Mrs. Dubbs?

Dubbs—Never better. And you? Boreleigh—Great! Say, old man, how about coming down to Windy mere for over Sunday?

Dubbs—Nothing I'd like better, only—

Boreleigh—Mrs. B. told me not to forget to ask you and the little lady to come out. We can have a corking old time together, and—

Dubbs—Bully! Nothing I'd like better. We were saying only the other night how much we wanted to see you and the madam. Only I can't promise for sure. Boreleigh, I'll have to speak to my wife about it. But we'll move heaven and earth to come. She may have some other engagement, you know. But even at that I'll see if I can't get her to break it.

Boreleigh—Great! Do your darnedest, old man. You used to be able to wheedle a bird off a tree with your persuasive eloquence, so try a little of it on, and we'll look for you on an early train. So long!

Dubbs—So long! I can hardly wait until Saturday.

Two hours later.

Dubbs—Who do you suppose I ran against today, Queenie?

Mrs. Dubbs—I don't know. Who?

Dubbs—That old jackass, Boreleigh! He wants us out there for Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Dubbs—Mercy, Harry! What did you tell him?

Dubbs—Said I'd be delighted, but I'd leave it to you, and I want you to see to it that we don't go. Understand?—Judge.

Different.

After committing some minor domestic crime the minister's small son escaped the wrath to come by hiding all day in the barn. As he could not be found all day all feeling other than alarm on his parents' part disappeared. In the evening the young fugitive returned.

Presently, taking him on his knees, the minister gravely said:

"It is true, my son, that I could not find you, but the Lord and evil one knew where you were."

"Oh, well, I wasn't worrying about that," replied the unrepentant youngster. "They weren't looking for me with shingles in their hands."—Truth Seeker.

Why No Fence Was Needed.

Mark Twain was spending a summer in a small town while a subscription was being raised by the citizens for the building of a new fence around a very old and dilapidated cemetery. Mark Twain was asked several times for a contribution, but each request was refused.

Upon being asked for an explanation of his disinterestedness he replied: "I see no reason for it. Those who are in the cemetery can't get out, and those who are out don't want to get in."—New York American.

Putting It Up Quick.

William, who was erecting an edifice out of building blocks, showed such unusually bungling workmanship that his father, who is a carpenter, took him to task.

Bring Your Friend.

"Come and dine with us tomorrow," said the illiterate old fellow who had made his money and wanted to push his way in society.

"Sorry," replied the elegant man. "I can't. I'm going to see 'Hamlet.'"

"That's all right," said the hospitable old gentleman. "Bring him with you."—Fun.

Explained.

"My wife lost her purse with $10 in it today," said a sad looking man.

"While going to town or coming home?" inquired a sympathizer.

"Didn't I say it had some money in it?" answered the sad looking man, and every one knew when she lost it.

For the Children

White Star Barry
and Beautiful Lady.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

An apt illustration of "the long and the short of it" was furnished at the recent dog show in New York city. The largest dog in the exhibition was White Star Barry, a huge, good natured St. Bernard, and the smallest was named Beautiful Lady, a diminutive, smooth haired Pomeranian. When posed for their pictures the little dog wasn't knee high to her big companion. Indeed, she only succeeded in hiding one of his feet. But size isn't everything, and Beautiful Lady won a ribbon fully as large and gorgeous as that awarded to White Star Barry. They both are canines of high degree, with imposing pedigrees, showing their royal descent.

A Pocket Game.

This is an especially jolly indoor game to play when the weather forces you to stay indoors. All the boys empty their pockets and spread the contents on the table. There ought to be about twenty-five or thirty objects—pencils, jackknives, corks, strings, pebbles, nuts and a dozen other things. As soon as they are spread out the table is quickly covered with a cloth or one of the boys' coats. The boy who is the leader of the game makes a list of the objects on the table on a piece of paper, with a column marked off at the side of the paper headed with each boy's name.

Now he uncovers the table, giving the boys an opportunity to look for one minute by his watch at the objects, after which he covers them over again. Then he takes each boy separately and lets him whisper as many of the objects as he can remember, checking them off in the column on the paper next the boy's name.

The boy who remembers the greatest number of articles from the pockets wins the game.—Delineator.

Time to Get Up.

Mr. Jerndahl of Boston says that he has a cat that he wouldn't sell for anything in the world. All he hopes is that the cat will keep out of harm's way, because if it should be killed or get seriously hurt or sick he would have to buy an alarm clock. He says that he has trained the cat to wake him up at a certain hour every morning and that the cat never fails. But what do you suppose he does Sunday mornings, when he follows the custom of the country and sleeps late? Probably the Jerndahls put the cat out Saturday night.

Why Water Boils.

Water boils because 212 degrees of heat converts it into steam, which, passing off, still keeps it at 212 degrees, when the effort of the whole to escape at once is repressed by that which, in evaporating, equalizes the temperature and creates the ebullition of boiling. The capacity of water for heat varies, however, with the atmospheric pressure to which it is subjected. In Chile, high in the mountainous district, it boils at 196 degrees.

Candy In England.

In England children say "sweets" instead of "candy." When they do say "candy" they mean what you get in boxes at $1 a pound. But they prefer the words "sugar plum," even though there is no plum with the sugar. And they take the word "taffy" and make it into "toffee" and then give that strange name to butterscotch. Taffy was originally a kind of candy made of Tafia (East Indian) sugar or molasses and rum.

My Kitty's Lost.

My kitty's lost, and I don't know just where to look for him. He's most all gray, but white as snow. Some places, too, so I have named him Spot.

But now he's lost! He's full of fun and just as dear and sweet. He used to play and romp and run and fight his brother, too—My pretty Spot!

He's surely lost! He never would desert me so, I'm sure. He loved me, so he never could. I hope he isn't dead—Poor little Spot!

CHAPTER VI.

Mary Mazuret.

M. R. HURLEY threw a swift glance at the detective's impassive face as if to see what hidden meaning lay back of this last speech, but he made no comment.

"You were the last person known to be with your father on the night of his death," pursued Kayton gravely.

The new head of the family looked very serious. "Yes, that's true," he said; "I was. I had dinner with Mary and him."

"Was that unusual?" inquired the detective.

The young man hesitated a bare instant. "Well, you know, I suppose that father and I didn't hit it off any too well together," he replied uncomfortably.

"You see, he was that kind of a man—he couldn't stand any one around who wanted to do any thinking for himself. He had his own ideas about things, and if you stood up against them there was trouble all along the line. I broke away—about a year ago—when—he hesitated again in some embarrassment—when he objected to my marrying Miss Thompson, and Mary has been trying ever since to bring us together. That night—his voice trembled slightly—"that night we had a fine time. She was as happy as could be about it, because father and I were on good terms again. She went to her room early and left us here to have a talk."

Kayton's face betrayed absolutely nothing of any impression he may have gained from this little tale.

"Did your father seem worried about anything?" he asked. Bruce thought for a moment and replied:

"He had a telephone call that disturbed him a good deal while I was here."

"What time was it?"

"Why, about 10."

"Did he receive it himself?"

"Yes; he was called on his private wire right here," Argyle indicated the desk phone.

"What did he say?"

"I can't remember," replied the young man slowly, "except that it was 'he' and 'yes' and 'no.' I thought it was some of his business affairs, and he seemed to want to think it over, so I left soon after."

"Where did you spend the night?" inquired the detective.

"In my studio, where I live."

"How did you get there—a taxi?"

"No; I walked."

"When did it begin to rain?"

"Rain?" echoed Argyle. "I didn't know it did rain."

"Did any one see you go into your studio?"

"Not that I know of," replied the young man, with a shake of the head.

Hurley threw a swift glance at the detective's impassive face.

"Any one drop in on you during the evening?"

"No."

Kayton studied the floor gravely for a moment and then asked:

"Is there any one in the surrounding apartments that could have seen you or your light?"

"Well," said Argyle doubtfully, "you know I have the rear of a top floor in an old Twenty-third street house with a skylight."

"Didn't you hear the rain on your skylight?" demanded Kayton swiftly.

"I tell you I didn't know it rained," declared the young man, with some peevishness. The best nerves and clearest conscience feel the effect of this sort of an examination. "I go to bed early," he explained, "and I get up as soon as there's light enough to work."

"Mr. Kayton," interposed the lawyer, "do you see anything significant in that telephone message?"

Kayton stared at the lawyer for a moment or two as if he had never seen him before. His abstraction seemed complete. Then his eyes slowly returned to Argyle's and he said slowly:

"Then you don't know of any way in which you can corroborate your statement that you left here about 10 o'clock and spent the rest of the night in your studio?"

Bruce was silent, and Kayton waited.

"No, no, I don't," said the young man in a low voice.

"Nobody saw you, you think—nobody saw you leave here?"

Again there was the barest hesitation and the low voice.

"No—no."

"You didn't see Finley?" Kayton's eyes were on the young man's face with piercing keenness, as if to read unspoken answers.

"No, I didn't see Finley at all." This answer came swiftly, as the detective expected it would. He shrugged his shoulders and half turned away.

"Mr. Argyle," he said coldly, "I don't want to be put in the position of cross-examining you. If you are not going to give me your confidence it would be better for me to drop the whole matter right here."

Argyle flushed slightly and his eyes shifted.

"Well—I—" he began.

"As a matter of fact," broke in Kayton abruptly, "just who was it that you thought you saw?"

Argyle's uneasiness increased. "Well, I don't want to say that I saw any one," he said reluctantly.

"You understand," said Kayton, with a stern frown, "that it might be very important that some one should have seen you leave this house."

"Oh—I see—well," the young man declared with the air of a man doing an extremely unpleasant duty. "I thought as I was going out that I saw somebody looking over the banister rail."

"What made you look up at the banister rail?" demanded Kayton, suppressing any trace of elation.

"I suppose I must have heard something," conceded Argyle grudgingly.

"Was it Miss Mazuret?" The question was almost a command.

The young man winced. "It might have been one of the maids," he parried.

"Why didn't you speak to her?"

"I wasn't sure—and she drew back. Look here, Hurley!" He wheeled on the lawyer with a glare. "You needn't give this to the papers. God knows what they'd make of it! They'd have Mary up there just waiting to—"

"Now, my dear fellow, don't be absurd!" interrupted the lawyer testily.

"The thing that strikes me as most significant is the telephone message. Don't you think so, Mr. Kayton?"

Kayton faced about on him.

"What do you see significant in it?" he inquired brusquely.

Mr. Hurley flinched slightly. He did not like the way in which his words were caught up every time.

"Well, now, I'll tell you about that," he declared. "You see, the person who called him up must have known his private telephone number. That would indicate some one who was familiar with the house and—"

"Yes?" said Kayton encouragingly as the lawyer paused.

"And the fact that he was disturbed by the message, but said nothing of it, might argue that it was some one known to him who was in a position to annoy him—possibly an old servant."

Kayton made no comment on this theory.

"Had he any business enemies?" he inquired.

"Well, now," began the lawyer again, and Kayton made a movement of impatience. "I'll tell you about that. You understand, of course, that I've only recently been associated with Mr. Argyle, and he didn't consult me about everything, but naturally a man of his many interests must have made enemies."

Bruce had been walking impatiently about the room while this conversation took place, and he now came forward.

"Mr. Kayton," he said desperately, "you may not be able to prove who did this. We'll be satisfied if you'll only prove that Miss Mazuret didn't."

"Well," replied the detective gravely, "the best way to prove who didn't kill him is to prove who did kill him. Is this Miss Mazuret?"

A tall, slender girl with great masses of deep brown hair and great dark, serious eyes came slowly into the room. Her cleanly cut, oval face was as white as her negligee gown, and she was plainly struggling to keep her composure.

"Yes," she said. "Mr. Kayton?"

"Yes," he replied with a bow. Bruce went swiftly to her and put his arm about her.

"You oughtn't to be down here, Mary," he reproached tenderly, with the air of an affectionate big brother.

"There's no need for it. You look awfully ill, Mary. It's too much for you. Please go back."

"I sent for Miss Mazuret," interposed Kayton quietly, his gaze on the girl's pale face.

"But, Mr. Kayton," protested Bruce, "you don't understand. It's too much to ask her to come down here. It's the first time the room has been opened since."

"No, no, Bruce," the girl interrupted gently; "it's all right now, please?"

"I should like to have a talk with Miss Mazuret alone if you don't mind," said Kayton in the same quiet tones, addressing the two men. But young Argyle was in open rebellion.

"She's had enough to bear!" he declared angrily. "I'm not going to have her put through any third degree!"

The detective's lips came together in a razorlike line.

"Just a moment, Mr. Argyle," he said icily. "Before we go any further with this investigation I want you to understand clearly that I am in sole charge of it."

"This is nonsense, Bruce!" exclaimed Mr. Hurley, coming forward. "Mr. Kayton has got to question Miss Mazuret if he's going to be of any help to her or to us. Come along with me."

But the young man refused to budge.

"Mary, don't you want me to stay here with you?" he asked. The girl took his arm and gently pushed him toward the door.

"No, no; thank you, Bruce," she replied steadily. "It's all right; please go."

He led her to a chair and made her sit in it and then reluctantly allowed Hurley to lead him out.

Kayton sighed wearily, drew up a chair near to the girl's and sat down.

"Miss Mazuret," he said gently in his most courteous manner, "I can understand that this affair has been a great shock to you. And you feel the loss of Mr. Argyle probably more than any one. I don't need to say that I sympathize with you thoroughly and that I don't want to do anything or ask anything that will distress you. But a murder has been committed, and if I am going to clear up these suspicions I must have the co-operation of everybody in the house and especially you."

"Yes, yes!" exclaimed the girl, with a pathetic eagerness that stirred the man beneath the expert's professional exterior. "I want to do everything—anything I can."

He nodded and smiled gratefully.

"Now, let's see," he began in the friendliest tone. "Where were you born?"

"In San Francisco," replied Miss Mazuret. She began to feel strangely at home with this masterful stranger.

"Do you remember your mother?"

"No." She shook her head. "I don't remember either my father or my mother very well. I was too young when they died."

"And you have no relatives?"

There was a moving quality of sympathy in the gentle voice.

"None that I ever heard of."

trembled violently and put her handkerchief to her lips.

"Oh, no, no!" she gasped. Then she stared wildly about, rose to her feet and burst into hysterical sobs. Kayton was beside her in an instant.

"What is it—what's the matter?" he demanded, and felt an impulse to put his arm about her as Bruce had done.

"I don't know—I—" sobbed the girl, her face buried in her hands—"I don't seem to be able to control myself—any longer."

Kayton touched a slender arm with clumsy solicitude.

"Wait—wait a moment," he urged her kindly.

"It's horrible," sobbed the muffled voice. "It's all so horrible! It's worse down here! I can't help thinking of him—on the floor—this floor!"

"Won't you try to put it out of your mind?" begged Kayton. "I want to help you."

The girl struggled bravely for self control and lowered her hands, disclosing a lovely, tear stained face.

"Yes, I know that," she said tremulously, darting him a look. "I haven't been like this before. I haven't talked about it to any one—I couldn't! I've tried to keep from reading the papers, but I had to! I read them all, and they're getting worse about me every day until it seemed as if the whole city—How is it possible they can make it all so probable?" she cried piteously, the tears streaming unchecked down her face. "Shall I have to go through a trial?"

"Oh, I think not," he said reassuringly. "We'll hardly let that happen now, tell me," he went on with gentle insistence, "you went to your room rather early that night? About 9:30?"

"Yes." The word came out uncertainly, but the storm was evidently over. Kayton, with almost womanly kindness, placed her in her chair again and sat beside her.

"Leaving Mr. Argyle and his son alone?" he went on encouragingly.

"Yes."

"You heard the son go?"

"Yes."

"You saw him go?"

A pause, and more slowly, "Yes," very slowly, as if to be sure of each word, "and I was a little alarmed. I got up—and opened my door."

"You heard voices?" suggested the detective as she paused.

"Yes—"

"Mr. Argyle's?"

"Yes—"

"Did you know who was with him?"

The question came swiftly on the heels of her answer. It brought a new expression to her dark eyes—terror.

"I—I wasn't sure," she replied with a desperate effort.

"Did you hear anything that sounded like a struggle?"

"No. They had closed the door."

"But you did hear angry voices?"

No reply.

"Didn't you?" insisted the detective sharply. There was a very faint and reluctant "Yes."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Suffered Twenty-One Years—Finally Found Relief.

Having suffered for twenty-one years with a pain in my side, I finally found relief in Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. The physicians called it "Mother's Pain" and injections of morphine were my only relief for short periods of time. I became so sick that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bottle and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity.

Gratefully yours,

MRS. JOSEPH CONSTANCE.

Avoyelles Parish, Marksville, La. Personally appeared before me, this 15th day of July, 1911, Mrs. Joseph Constance, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

Careful Boy.

Two American tourists on their way to Abbotsford were in doubt about the road to take and the time it would occupy to get there. Halting a passing lad, they put the necessary questions. The native replied by showing the route, but did not know how long it would take to get there. The tourists resumed their journey, but had scarcely gone a hundred yards when they heard a yell.

"It will take you an hour," called the boy at the pitch of his voice.

"Why didn't you tell us that before?" returned one of the Americans.

"I couldn't tell ye afore I knew hoo fast ye could walk."—Dundee Advertiser.

What She Wanted.

She walked into the public library and sweetly said:

"I would like 'The Red Boat,' please."

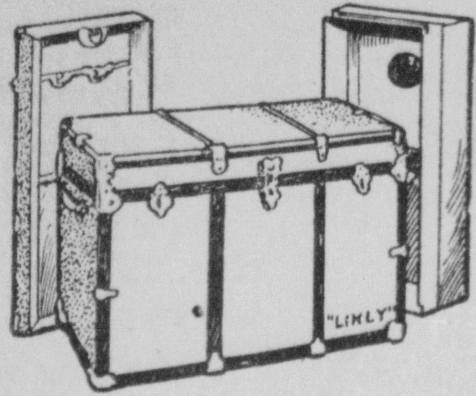

The librarian diligently searched the catalogue and came back with "I don't think we have such a book."

Flushing a bit, she sweetly said, "May the title be 'The Scarlet Yacht?'"

Again he looked, with the same result. Then with her pretty fingers she went into her bag, consulted a slip of paper and said:

For a Red Blotchy Skin

The Remarkable Action of a Famous Remedy and Some Facts About it.

Get Your Blood Purified With S. S. S. and You Won't be Tortured Like This.

The skin is but a net work of fine blood vessels. And it is a perfectly natural consequence that any influence in the blood that is a condition of ill health makes its first appearance in the skin. There are certain medicinal properties that follow the course of the blood stream and the influence of these properties is that of an antitoxin. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.
Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The TILSON-DAY.

A very pretty wedding occurred
Thursday evening at the home of Mr.
and Mrs. Sherman Day on South
Chestnut street when their daughter, Miss Anna E. Day, was given in marriage to Mr. Virgil C. Tilson, of Franklin. There was a large attendance of guests to witness the ceremony. As the wedding march was played by Dr. R. G. Haas, the bride party entered the room, which had been prepared for the occasion and the beautiful ceremony was pronounced by Rev. F. M. Huckleberry.
The bride was dressed in a beautiful gown of white satin with chiffon drapery and pearl trimmings. The groom appeared in the usual black.
After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs.
Tilson received the congratulations and best wishes of the large number of friends who were present.

The bride is one of our well known young ladies and for sometime has been connected with the Seymour Mutual Telephone Company, first as operator and more recently at bookkeeper. She has a wide circle of friends among the young people of our city. The groom is a fireman on the B. & O. S-W. His former home was north of Franklin, where he is a member of one of the most highly respected families of Johnson county. Mr. and Mrs. Tilson left on the 10:45 car last night for Franklin, where a reception is to be given for them this afternoon at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Thomas Tilson. They will make their future residence in Seymour and will be at home to their friends after June 15th at 119 West Tipton street.

The out-of-town guests were Mr.
and Mrs. Minor Tilson, Mr. and Mrs.
J. T. Kennick, Mr. and Mrs. Louis
Farrell, Mrs. L. T. Tinkle and Miss Harriet Freeman of Greenwood, Mrs.
J. Thomas Tilson and Mr. and Mrs.
Joe Vest of Franklin, Mr. and Mrs.
Clarence Bradford of Spring Valley, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Day of Jeffersonville, Mrs. Sarah Martin of Newpoint and Miss Myrtle Foster of Greensburg. Miss Foster accompanied the bridal party to Franklin.

At the close of the regular meeting of the city council the councilmen attended the wedding in a body at the invitation of the bride's father, Sherman Day who is a member of the council.

DINNER PARTY.

Mrs. Roy Harrell entertained the South Side Social Club at a six her husband's birthday. An elegant three course dinner was served, cov-the dinner the evening was spent in games and music which were thoroughly enjoyed by the guests. The song-given by Herbert Parker and daughter were appreciated. Mr. Harrell received the hearty congratulations of his friends, and Mrs. Harrell was complimented upon her hospitality.

The out-of-town guests were Mrs.
Harrell's mother and sister, Mrs.
Kidwell and Miss Gertrude Kidwell, of Camersville.

Mrs. J. L. Blair entertained the members of the Bridge Club yesterday afternoon at her home on North Ewing street in honor of her guests.
The house was attractively decorated with red rambler roses and daisies. The afternoon was spent in bridge after which a luncheon was served by the Misses Ada Cordes, Harriet Montgomery, Marguerite Miller, Lora Reynolds and Luella Toms.
The out-of-town guests were Mrs.
Ida M. VanHorn, Mrs. Roy C. Van
Horn, Mrs. George E. Bell, Mrs. S.
A. Tanner, Mrs. H. J. Coeter and daughter, Miss Hazel, of Indianapolis and Mrs. W. A. Tanner of Chicago.

SCHMITT-ZUFALL.

Miss Maybelle Schmitt, of this city,
and Samuel Zufall, of New Albany, whose marriage was announced for Thursday evening, surprised their friends by having the ceremony pronounced Wednesday evening. The wedding took place at the study of Rev. Dr. W. Graham, pastor of the Central Christian church, at New Albany. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene P. Schmitt and is one of Seymour's popular young ladies. Mr. and Mrs. Zufall will reside at New Albany where he is employed.

MANY LEGISLATORS ARE NATIVES OF THIS STATE

Nineteen of the Present Body at Washington Were Born in The Hoosier State.

Indiana continues to retain its reputation as a state that furnishes material out of which other states make members of the congress of the United States. In the present national legislative body are five United States senators and nineteen representatives who were born in Indiana.
This list includes the two Indiana senators, who are native Hoosiers, and eleven of the thirteen representatives of the state, who were born in the state.

The Indiana-born senators are John Downey Works of California;
Moses E. Clapp, Minnesota; William Howard Thompson, Kansas; Benjamin F. Shively and John W. Kern, of Indiana. Senator Works is a native of Ohio county. He was reared on a farm, and at the age of sixteen years enlisted in the army, in which he served eighteen months, and until the close of the war. He moved to California in 1882, where he became judge of the superior court of San Diego county and later a justice of the state supreme court. Senator Clapp is a native of Delphi, where he passed his boyhood days. He went to Wisconsin with his parents while yet a youth. Senator Thompson, who has just made his appearance in the upper branch of the congress from Kansas, was born at Crawfordville.
His parents took him to Kansas when he was nine years of age.

The list of Indiana-born members of the house includes Burton Lee French, representative-at-large from Idaho, who was born near Delphi,
and who is now serving his last term;
Frank Buchanan, who represents the Seventh Illinois (Chicago) district, and who was born on a farm in Jefferson county; Joseph Fordney, of the Eighth Michigan district, who was born in Blackford county; Dan V. Stephens, of the Third Nebraska district, who was born near Valparaiso, and who went west when he was twenty years old; Dick Thompson Morgan, of the Second Oklahoma district, who was born on a farm in Prairie Creek township, Vigo county, where his parents still live; Charles Hall Dillon, of the first South Dakota district, who was born near Jasper, and who was graduated from the Indiana state University; William E.
Humphrey, of the First Washington
district, who was born near Alamo, Montgomery county, and who was graduated from Wabash college, Crawfordsville, and William L. Lafollette, of the Third Washington district, only ten miles from the birthplace of his colleague, Mr. Humphrey.

Representative Charles Lieb, of the First Indiana district, and Representative Cyrus Cline, of the Twelfth district, are the only members of the Indiana delegation who are not native Indians. Mr. Lieb is a German by birth, while Mr. Cline is a native of Richland County, Ohio.
Some twelve or fifteen members of the house from other states were educated in Indiana. Frank T.
O'Hair, the successor of Joseph G.
Cannon, was educated at DePauw University. Two Michigan members were graduated from the normal school at Valparaiso, and the state university has furnished several members.

GIVES ALL CREDIT TO NATURE'S CREATION

OSCAR P. WINEBRENNER.

Giving Nature's Creation "all the credit" for his "present good health," Oscar P. Winebrenner, 2938 Hope street, Indianapolis, in a public statement, tells of the remarkable results accomplished in a short time by this remedy.

"For over a year I had a deep cough which was caused from bronchial and catarrhal trouble," he writes. "Now my cough has entirely disappeared and I have gained in weight."

Mr. Winebrenner's letter dated March 1, 1913, follows:

"I am glad to let other sufferers know about Nature's Creation and what it has done for me. My bronchial tubes were affected and I coughed incessantly night and day. I became very much run down, couldn't eat anything, digestion and sleep were poor and I lost in strength. I was finally compelled to give up my work with the railroad company. Mrs. Roberson, who is a neighbor of mine, and whose husband and son, Nature's Creation, with splendid results, advised me to try it, and so I got a bottle. In the first two weeks
I felt considerably better, and after taking the bottle I was able to go to work again. I continued taking the medicine and to-day I am feeling fine. I am sleeping well and eat heartily. I certainly give Nature's Creation all the credit for my present good health. Oscar P. Wine-brenner, 2938 Hope street."

The original letter from Mr. Winebrenner is on file in our office along with scores of others telling of the remarkable benefits derived by men, women and children from Nature's Creation. Write
